The main reason for these rules is to make your document easy to read and look professional. Random capitalization makes things look messy and can be confusing.

General Rule: Sentence Case is Your Best Friend

Most of the time, in business documents, you'll use what's called Sentence Case. This means:

- First word of a sentence is capitalized.
- All other words in the sentence are lowercase, unless they fall into a specific capitalization rule (which we'll get to).

Example (Sentence Case):

- "The meeting will begin at 10:00 AM."
- "Please submit your report by Friday."

Where to Use CAPITAL LETTERS (Uppercase):

1. Start of a Sentence:
   o Rule: Every new sentence begins with a capital letter.
   o Example: "Our company is growing. We are expanding into new markets. This strategy will increase our revenue."
2. Proper Nouns (Specific Names):
   o Rule: Capitalize specific names of people, places, organizations, brands, days of the week, months, and specific events.
   o Examples:
     ▪ People: John Smith, Sarah Jones, Dr. Emily White
     ▪ Places: New York City, Eiffel Tower, India, Asia
     ▪ Organizations: Google, Microsoft, World Health Organization (WHO), Red Cross
     ▪ Brands/Products: iPhone, Coca-Cola, Tesla Model 3
     ▪ Days of the Week: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday
     ▪ Months: January, February, March
     ▪ Specific Events: Olympic Games, World Cup, Annual Sales Conference 2025
3. Titles of People (When used before a name or as a specific title):
   o Rule: Capitalize titles when they come directly before a proper name, or when referring to a specific, high-ranking title without a name (though this is less common in general business prose).
   o Examples:
     ▪ "We met with President Smith."
     ▪ "Director Johnson approved the project."
     ▪ (But: "He is a director at the company.")
4. First Word in a Bullet Point or Numbered List:
   o Rule: If your bullet point or numbered list item is a complete sentence, capitalize the first word. If it's a short phrase or single word, it's often capitalized for consistency, though lowercase is also acceptable if it's not a full sentence and you're consistent. For clarity, it's often best to treat them as sentences.

- o Examples:
  - Our goals are:
    - Increase customer satisfaction by 20%.
    - Develop a new marketing strategy.
    - Launch the product by Q4.

5. Acronyms and Initialisms:
   - o Rule: Capitalize all letters in acronyms (pronounced as a word) and initialisms (pronounced letter by letter).
   - o Examples:
     - NASA (National Aeronautics and Space Administration)
     - CEO (Chief Executive Officer)
     - IT (Information Technology)
     - HR (Human Resources)
     - GST (Goods and Services Tax)

6. Headings and Subheadings (Title Case vs. Sentence Case):
   - o Rule (Title Case - More Formal/Traditional): Capitalize the first letter of most major words (nouns, verbs, adjectives, adverbs) in a heading. Do not capitalize articles (a, an, the), coordinating conjunctions (and, but, or), and prepositions (in, on, with) unless they are the first word.
   - o Rule (Sentence Case - Increasingly Common/Modern): Only capitalize the first word of the heading and any proper nouns within it. This aligns with the general sentence case rule and often feels less formal but very clean.
   - o Examples:
     - Title Case: "The Importance of Strategic Planning" or "Marketing Your New Product"
     - Sentence Case: "The importance of strategic planning" or "Marketing your new product"
     - Recommendation: Choose one style (Title Case or Sentence Case) for your headings and stick to it consistently throughout your document. For most business documents, Sentence Case for headings is becoming very popular due to its simplicity and readability.

Where to Use SMALL LETTERS (Lowercase):

1. Common Nouns:
   - o Rule: Unless it's the first word of a sentence or a proper noun, common nouns are lowercase.
   - o Examples: "The company held a meeting to discuss the new project." (Company, meeting, project are common nouns.)

2. Articles (a, an, the):
   - o Rule: These are almost always lowercase, unless they are the first word of a sentence or a capitalized heading (in Title Case).
   - o Examples: "The report is due. This is a good opportunity."

3. Prepositions (on, in, at, with, for, to, from, etc.):
   - o Rule: Generally lowercase, unless they are the first word of a sentence or a capitalized heading (in Title Case).

- Examples: "The data is in the system. We met for lunch."
4. Conjunctions (and, but, or, so, because, etc.):
    - Rule: Generally lowercase, unless they are the first word of a sentence or a capitalized heading (in Title Case).
    - Examples: "We need more data and better analysis."
5. Job Titles (when used generically or after a name):
    - Rule: If a job title doesn't come directly before a name, or if you're talking about the role in general, use lowercase.
    - Examples:
        - "She is the director of marketing."
        - "The chief financial officer presented the budget."
        - (But: "We met with Chief Financial Officer [Name].")
6. Department Names (when not used as proper nouns or specific entities):
    - Rule: Unless referring to the official, specific name of a department (e.g., "the Department of Human Resources"), generally use lowercase.
    - Examples:
        - "The marketing department is working on a new campaign."
        - (But: "Please send the request to the Human Resources Department.")

Key Principles to Remember:

- Consistency is Crucial: Whatever rules you decide to follow (especially for headings), be consistent throughout your entire document. Inconsistency looks unprofessional.
- When in Doubt, Use Lowercase: If you're unsure whether to capitalize a word, defaulting to lowercase is often the safer bet, as over-capitalization is a more common mistake and makes text harder to read.
- Audience and Context: While these are general rules, sometimes very formal legal documents or specific industries might have slightly different conventions. However, for most general business communication, these guidelines are solid.
- Read Aloud: Sometimes reading your document aloud can help you catch awkward capitalization that disrupts the flow.

By following these simple rules, your business documents will be clear, professional, and easy for anyone to read!
